Michael and Chris, have you seen this? Interesting in that it is one unit that covers a wide range of observations - from potholes, sidewalk, sanitation, and sewer to graffiti, street signs, and signals. Also interesting that it reports to the Mayor's office and that it uses the existing CRM system for reporting. The graphical interface is pretty cool but you have to put in a real NYC address to see the details - specific location, description of complaint.

Street Condition Observation Unit (SCOUT)

The Street Condition Observation Unit (SCOUT) is comprised of 15 inspectors who report to the Mayor's Office of Operations. The inspectors are charged with driving every New York City street every month of the year. While surveying city streets, inspectors report visually-identifiable street conditions into a hand-held device that wirelessly transmits the data to the Mayor's Office.

From the Mayor's Office, conditions are sent to the 311 Customer Service Center where reports are treated just as calls from the public would be and sent to appropriate city agencies for response.

Survey: Bostons Q3 vacancy lowest in U.S.

Boston Business Journal - by Michelle Hillman

Boston had the lowest overall vacancy rate in the nation at the end of the third quarter and the second highest average rental rates for commercial space, according to a national survey by real estate firm Cushman & Wakefield.

The lowest vacancy rates at the end of the third quarter were Boston at 7 percent; New York at 7.4 percent; Washington, D.C., at 7.9 percent; New Haven, Conn., at 8 percent and Portland, Ore., at 8.5 percent.

Boston had the second-highest average rents at the end of the third quarter, with landlords charging $50.09 per square foot, a 70-cent increase from the previous quarter. The highest asking rent at the end of the third quarter was New York's $72.97 per square foot, an increase of $1.38 from the previous quarter.

Rising unemployment year to date, and the more recent impact of issues affecting the banking and financial services sector have caused many occupiers to re-evaluate their long-term space requirements prior to making commitments, Maria Sicola, executive managing director and head of Research for Cushman & Wakefield, said in a statement. We expect average asking rents to show statistical declines by the end of this year and vacancies to continue to rise through at least the first three quarters of 2009.

Nationally, office vacancy rates increased to 10.6 percent at the end of the third quarter from 10.2 percent the previous quarter. The most significant factor in the rise was the increase in the sublease vacancy rate, which rose to 1.5 percent at the end of September, from 1.2 percent at the end of June.

The rise in vacancy coincides with a 13.6 percent decline in office leasing activity, which totaled 53.4 million square feet nationwide through the end of the third quarter, compared with 61.8 million square feet for the same time last year.

Cushman & Wakefield expects 15 million square feet of new office construction to be completed in major U.S. cities throughout 2009. So far this year, 6.9 million square feet of new construction completions have been added to the market, compared to 7.6 million square feet of construction completions through the third quarter of 2007.

The most active markets for new construction year-to-date include New York, with more than 2.1 million square feet; Washington, D.C., with 1.2 million square feet; Bellevue and Seattle, Wash., with 978,000 square feet; and 518,000 square feet, respectively, and Chicago, with 439,000 square feet.

Station clock takes timeout

Watch this: 110-year-old mechanism set for an overhaul

By Noah Bierman, Globe Staff | October 15, 2008

There are no manuals explaining how to fix the iconic clock atop South Station, just a professional tinkerer named Paul Calantropo.

He spent yesterday in the station's dusty clock tower, oiling gears of the 110-year-old timepiece that he plans to take apart - one pin and gear shaft at a time - and then painstakingly manufacture any worn-out parts in his Downtown Crossing workshop.

"Every single piece has to be handmade," he said. "There's no parts available."

Calantropo understands the gravity of his task. The clock harkens to another era, when the precision of its hands, moving around cast-iron Roman numerals, branded Boston as a modern and punctual city. Though once fairly common, such clocks have become a rarity, with only a handful of craftsmen capable of fixing them.

The clock is now more a piece of nostalgia than it is a display of technology, but it must remain accurate so the BlackBerry-toting commuters in the Financial District don't miss their trains.

"I'm there every month, oiling it, and making sure nothing's wrong with it," said Calantropo, who also makes twice-annual adjustments to accommodate daylight saving time.

Tomorrow, he'll dismantle it and bring back all 400 pounds of gears, shifts, and plates to his workshop in the Jewelers Exchange Building at Downtown Crossing for an overhaul. Once there, he'll put the clock back together again to evaluate what it needs.

Then he'll take it apart again and create new screws, bolts, and teeth for the ones that have worn down. He'll remove the rust, polish the shaft, correct the bearings.

Then he'll rebuild it for a second time, test it yet again, and dismantle it before bringing it back to the clock tower.

In the meantime, crews will repair the worn bricks and rusty steel rafters in the 30-foot-tall clock tower, which is now leaking and damaging the clock. Yesterday, as Calantropo climbed the tower's narrow staircase, bits of rust rained below his every step.

During six weeks of repairs, the clock's original 12-foot-wide face, made of a thick frosted glass, will remain in its place near the top of the train station facade, below the 80-ton granite eagle overlooking the Financial District. But the hands will remain frozen at the noon position while Calantropo tinkers with the rest of the timepiece in his workshop.

Calantropo has refurbished plenty of similar old clocks, as far away as Bermuda and as close as the 1766 clock on top of the Old South Meeting House near his office. (He says that clock needs repairs again, but he hasn't heard from the custodians.) Two decades ago, he brought the South Station clock back to working order after decades of disrepair.

"I was a watchmaker," said Calantropo, 57, who has been fixing big clocks for 30 years. "So this was an extension of the same field, just bigger."

The South Station clock was made in Roxbury, by the former E. Howard Clock Company, at a time when there were thousands of similar clocks at public buildings around New England. Its escapement, which, like Big Ben's, relies on gravity to keep the pendulum swinging, is also a relic. It's the largest one like it in New England, says Equity Office, the company that runs South Station under a lease with the state.

The escapement, which separates the weight of the 250-pound metal pendulum from the movement of the clock, prevents the hands from moving backward when snow and ice assault them.

Another man, Jeffrey Jackman, has been winding the clock by hand twice a week, turning a heavy crank about 90 times, since 1988. It's a point of pride for Jackman, South Station's property manager, even if it does tire him out.

"It's part of history," he said. "She's a gem, all right."

At least one of the clock's teeth, from the smallest of its five gears, is chipped and needs replacing. Calantropo will use a lathe and a milling machine at his workshop - a storehouse of old ticking and tocking devices covered with glass domes - to fabricate the replacement parts. Equity Office will pay Calantropo $18,000 for the labor-intensive job. Calantropo said it would probably cost $250,000 to build a new clock like the one in South Station. Similar old clocks can sell for between $20,000 and $50,000, though there wouldn't be many suitable buyers, he said.

"They're priceless, and I don't want to say worthless, all at once," he said. "Because you have to have a station to display it."

"Anderson has not just delivered an equally haunting second and final act to his hero's story, he's completed a literary masterpiece that simply blows away its limited categorization as Young Adult lit."

Hi Michael,

Claremont made an agenda for the upcoming general meeting at their board meeting this past week. Jay and I will be at the meeting next Wednesday.

Issues and questions that the Claremont Neighborhood will be discussing at their regular meeting on Wednesday 10/15:

City Budget and the allocation of resources and city services

How is it decided what different neighborhoods get in the budget?

Do some neighborhoods get disproportionately more than others?

Does need or condition of the neighborhood factor into who gets what services?

Why do some streets get street sweeping and big bellies, while others with a seemingly equal need don't?

Let me know if you want to discuss anything before the meeting.

Have a great weekend.

Dear Superintendent Johnson,

What follows are four questions that I believe frame the concerns of many of the community activists. I am sending them in advance with the hope that you will be able to speak to them specifically on the 21st.

1. What is the rationale for each of the recommendations in the proposal?
2. What educational strategies and interventions will accompany each of the proposed organizational changes so that parents can be assured they will lead to improved educational quality for their children?
3. What is the impact of the proposals on equity of choice and access to seats and programs by neighborhood and zone?
4. There are many specific issues that are included in these general questions. For example, there are particular concerns about the closing of the Higginson School in Roxbury, and the suggestion that BPS should consider moving to a 60-40 walk zone preference system. Why is there no recommendation to expand the International High School, when this successful program needs additional space?

Also, could you have your research department forward the data on the following questions?

1. How many families chose schools outside of their walk zone? Did they receive their preferred choice or were the assigned else where?
2. How many students attend schools that are outside of their walk zone? How many students are attending those schools (outside of walk zone) because it was their 1st of 2nd choice?

3. How many students attend schools within their walk zone? Was it their 1st or 2nd choice? Were they administratively assigned?
4. What was the impact of the “new” algorithm?
5. How many families in Roxbury chose schools outside of their walk zone? How many received their preferred school outside of the walk zone? How many would receive their choice under a proposed 60-40 plan? How many would be denied access to their preferred schools?
6. Same question as above... as it applies to families in West Roxbury?
7. How many of the BPS schools are underperforming to the extent that parents can request a waiver and in which zones are those schools located.

We just found out that Joe tore his rotator cuff.

We are looking for a second opinion. The BFD sent him to a doctor that works out of Carney Hospital. We are looking for a doctor at the New England Baptist. I went online and found a couple. Did you have your surgery at the Baptist? They are the best orthopaedic. We also have an appointment with Dr. Thomas Holovacs from MGH.

Any suggestions.

Hi Michael:

Haven't emailed you in a while, but Judy Evers called me and alerted me to a few postings on the website in your Housing Development Department. I filled out the application for 335502 (Sr. Housing Development Officer), but I'm not sure it went through. The power went out here a few times today while I was filling it out(no idea why), and I'm hoping that it did go through, but just in case, I attached a copy of my resume for you and the job listing number. Judy also told me email you that I applied for the position.

Hope all is well with you. I emailed KJ too, and he told me to call you, but I remember you telling me you prefer email, so that is what I am doing. I'm not sure how I should proceed from here, so I'll wait to hear from you or the designated person for the position on the next step. This is exactly the opportunity I am looking for! I have worked in affordable housing in one capacity or another for most of my career with a brief step-out of the box when the real estate market was bad in the early 90's. I would absolutely love an opportunity to interview with the City. I appreciate anything you can do. Thanks again, and I will let Judy know that I contacted you. Hopefully I'll get to stop in and see you.

Kerry, Beatty to debate on WTKK on Oct. 27

The date and time for one of U.S. Sen. John Kerry and Republican challenger Jeff Beatty's debates is set for Monday, Oct. 27, according to WTKK radio.

Kerry and Beatty will appear on Jim Braude and Margery Eagan's WTKK radio show on Oct. 27 from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m., the station said.

According to WTKK's release, the Kerry, a Boston Democrat, and Beatty, a Harwich Republican, will spend 45 minutes in a "traditional, yet conversational format with each candidate answering questions on the big state and national issues facing Massachusetts residents." That will be followed by 10 minutes of "rapid-fire" questions from WTKK listeners and other media. Beatty and Kerry will then have up to 96 seconds for closing statements.

STREET TALK!

A night of StreetFILMS. Premiere of LivableStreets "Park(ing) Day" film short, and exciting advocacy film shorts (and commentary).

Thu. Oct. 23, 7:00 - 9:00 pm

by Clarence Eckerson, NYC Filmmaker

@ LivableStreets office space, 100 Sidney Street, Central Square, Cambridge  [map... ]

free and open to the public, donation suggested, beer/sodas provided compliments of Harpoon Brewery!

Get ready to be inspired by the possibilities for livable streets in/around Boston!!

Come out and watch the premiere of our first LivableStreets StreetFilm about Park(ing) Day 2008 by George Zisiadis! Then watch the films that inspired our new project, and hear from the filmmaker himself, Clarence Eckerson! See pedestrians in Melbourne, Ciclovía in Bogota, Summer Streets in New York City, and more.

The mission of StreetFilms is to document livable streets best practices throughout the world and show citizens that their streets can be better places for all users. The ultimate goal is to encourage more human- friendly cities and rethink how our streets can better foster walking, bicycling, and transit.

Clarence has nearly one hundred StreetFilms to his credit and has been called "the hardest working man in transportation show biz" for his years of dedication to create videos that are enlightening, entertaining and inspiring.

Q: What's happening?

A: The BU Bridge will be reconstructed and the DCR wants your input!

Q: Why attend this meeting?

A: Because many more pedestrians and cyclists are using the bridge and improvements are needed to improve safety.

Q: What would an ideal redesign include?

- On-street bicycle lanes.
- 3 lanes instead of 4, enabling the inclusion of bicycle lanes.
- Widened sidewalks/ped-bike paths using cantilevers.
- Coordinated traffic signals for more efficient traffic flow.
- Improved rotary and paths on the Cambridge side for bicyclists and pedestrians.
- Improved street crossings on Boston side.
- New access from the bridge to the Charles River Path on the Boston side.

Finally, be sure to thank the DCR for taking the time to consider your input.

Kudos to Boston Transportation Department

Plans for Boylston St and Audubon Circle will better for all users

On September 17, Vineet Gupta from the Boston Transportation Department (BTD) and consultants HNTB presented their final conceptual plans for a redesigned Boylston St and Audubon Circle. Based on previous feedback from the Fenway/Longwood/Kenmore community as well as a wide range of advocacy groups, the latest designs put a strong emphasis on non-motorized users while preserving traffic capacity.

The plan for Boylston St calls for wide sidewalks, bike lanes, many more trees, and curb extensions at intersections to reduce crossing distances. The vision for Boylston St is that of an urban boulevard, one that complements the many redevelopment efforts taking place to replace car-oriented businesses with mixed-use pedestrian-friendly buildings. The plan for Audubon Circle calls for expanding the sidewalks and closing in the corners, creating mini-plazas. It also calls for realignment of lanes, the addition of bike lanes, and the retiming of signals to improve the intersection's safety and operation.

Based on the consensus from the meeting, the Boylston St plans will be the finalized conceptual plans. The crowd also thought favorably of the Audubon Circle plans, although BTD will be holding an additional meeting near Audubon Circle to ensure that nearby residents are fully informed and have a chance to give feedback if they have not done so already. Once consensus is reached on the Audubon Circle plans, BTB will move forward with having detailed technical plans created from both conceptual plans, with a goal of starting construction in 2010.

Meeting notes and conceptual plans can be found on BTB's website:

<http://www.cityofboston.gov/transportation/flk/>

LivableStreets commends and applauds BTB and the consultants for creating plans that truly serve the needs of all users. Boylston St and Audubon Circle will without a doubt serve residents and visitors better as these designs become reality, contributing to the economic and social vitality of the neighborhood.

Interactive Public Workshop: Transformation of Mass Ave in Arlington

Thursday - October 23, 2008 at 7:00 PM

Town Hall Auditorium, 730 Massachusetts Avenue

The transformation of Mass Ave from a transportation corridor to one of Arlington's GREAT pedestrian friendly streets is beginning. Join us to envision and plan the future! Hear more about what's happening and tell us your ideas! Improvements will strive for a healthy balance between automobiles, bikes and pedestrians to create a truly livable, pedestrian friendly street - where people feel safe and comfortable meeting, shopping and strolling - and a vehicular traffic system that is safe, efficient and easy to understand. Improvements we may consider include:

- Shorter and more visible crosswalks that can be used safely and easily
- Traffic calming on neighborhood streets
- Clearly marked and dedicated bikeways and travel lanes
- Changes in street width and sidewalk width that offer options for seating, cafés and landscaping
- Improved on-street parking to support healthy retail in the East Arlington commercial district.
- Improved and coordinated traffic signals
- Pedestrian scale lighting for safety at key locations and a consistent character
- Site furnishings that make life more comfortable - benches, bike racks, trash receptacles, bus shelters and street trees
- Unmistakable gateways into East Arlington from Cambridge and Arlington Center

Cambridge Bicycle, Pedestrian Committees seek new members

Deadline to Apply November 24, 2008

The City of Cambridge is looking for people who enjoy walking or bicycling to join its pedestrian and bicycle committees. Pedestrians and cyclists of all ages are encouraged to apply. The two committees work on a variety of issues. They review major development and roadway plans from a pedestrian or cyclist perspective. They work with city staff on both general policies and specific projects. Both committees are concerned with such issues as enforcement of traffic laws, traffic calming, improving city facilities, public education, and promotion. Both include citizen members and representatives of city departments. Committee applicants should be enthusiastic walkers or cyclists who live in Cambridge, can attend monthly meetings, and are willing to work on projects. The pedestrian committee generally meets on the fourth Thursday of the month from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. The bicycle committee meets on the second Wednesday from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Both groups usually meet at City Hall Annex, 344 Broadway, Cambridge. To apply for appointment to either one of the committees, send a letter by November 24, 2008 describing your interest in pedestrian or bicycle issues and the kinds of projects or issues you would like to work on to Robert W. Healy, City Manager. The email address is randers@cambridgema.gov. The postal service address is c/o Rosalie Anders, Environmental and Transportation Planning, 344 Broadway, Cambridge, MA 02139. Appointments are for two years. Lauren,I've checked with our General Counsel and as I had suspected providing information about our Section 8 landlords is a violation of state privacy laws.We have, however, for about 8 or 9 years been working with Carol Thompson of the Boston police department in a collaborative effort to insure we are getting information about Section 8 certificate holders who are involved in criminal activity throughout the city of Boston. In short, this effort works in the following way. Carol forwards police1/1 reports involving criminal activity to David Gleich an Attorney in our leased housing division.These reports are based on activity in the private housing market.Carol has no idea if any of the reports she is forwarding involve certificate holders or members of there families. David cross references these reports with our internal listing of certificate holders. As an employee of the BHA David has the legal right to this information.If he discovers a match he begins the process to terminate the family from the Section 8 program. He also notifies the landlord that the BHA is beginning the process of terminating the subsidy and he advises them to begin eviction proceedings.This process is somewhat in reverse ,if you will,of what you are proposing ,but it accomplishes the same objective while staying within the confines of the state law.You should also know we terminate the subsidies of approximately 500 Section 8 certificate holders per year here at the Authority.We administer about 11,000certificates.500 is then a significant # and certainly suggests that the BHA is aggressively dealing with this issue. Concerning the screening of landlords we certainly can discuss that further.The outcome may be more geared toward educating them about there legal responsibilities and obligations to the communities where they own property.Moreover we have on occasion tossed landlords out of the program .In conclusion I think we should meet to come up with a press/PR strategy focused at least for know on the C-11 area.We could let people know what we do, .as I suspect some folks think we don't have a system in place to" weed" these folks out and we do. Also folks need to know the results of that system that is in place[500 terminations a year].we could also include a new and improved training/educational effort for Section 8 landlords.. Let's set up a meeting to discuss next steps

Michael,

Thank you for convening yesterday's meeting -- I think we made excellent progress. I will keep you in the loop as we move the transition forward.

I wanted to make you aware of an event that is in the draft stage but stands a good chance of occurring. Ed DeMore and I are working with folks at the Federal Reserve Bank to convene two seminars about the financial crisis sometime in early December. The first would be at the FRB and we would like to have the second at Faneuil Hall and have it be open to the public. Our goal is to have a non-partisan, fact-based analysis and discussion of the crisis. We are talking with Larry Summers, Marsh Carter and Barney Frank as possible presenters. The event will be moderated by Crocker Snow, a former Boston Globe reporter and editor and publisher of the World Paper. We would like to invite the Mayor to welcome the audience and give remarks. Can you give me your thoughts on whether TMM would be interested and whether we could use Faneuil Hall?

I've attached a draft document that provides more details about the event. Here is the URL for another series of seminars that we are producing around international issues www.BHISymposia.org.

Sincerely,

Steve

Subject: Fwd: Today's Gift - 10/15/2008

---

It is the act of forgiveness that opens up the only possible way to think creatively about the future at all.
-- Father Desmond Wilson

Today is full of endless possibilities and dreams. In many cases, we are limited only by our fear and lack of hope, in others and ourselves. Each new day we are given a clean page to live in our book of life.

What freedom we find when we choose to practice the art of forgiveness. Forgiving others and ourselves will allow us to step into this new day as free human beings. What can really hurt us in the present if we have the key to daily forgiveness? What could our friend, boss, or enemy possibly say that would be worth the emotional price of on-going resentment?

Freedom is a gift we give ourselves every time we choose not to react to a hurtful comment. Holding on to old resentments keeps our creative energy trapped and stifled. Our choices are these: new freedom or old resentment. We choose new freedom. It is the gift we give ourselves when we choose not to let the sun rise on yesterday's script.

Today let me forgive everyone and anything - past and present - that might distract me from my spiritual growth.

Planned Parenthood not endorsing in Wilkerson/Chang-Diaz race

Planned Parenthood of Massachusetts, a primary backer of Dianne Wilkerson, is not endorsing the state senator or Sonia Chang-Diaz in their general election match up.

Colin Moore, a spokesman for the organization, told PolitickerMA.com Wednesday that Planned Parenthood's political arm has opted to stay out of the race.

"The advocacy fund board has decided we will stay neutral," Moore said.

Spanish Word of the Day

copa, noun
glass

We've already come across copa to talk about a glass with a stem, especially a wineglass.

Sólo tomé una copa de vino.
I only had one glass of wine.

From this meaning comes the more general meaning of drink:

Te invito a una copa.
Let me buy you a drink.

It is also used in the set verbal phrase:

tomar una(s) copa(s)
to have a drink

Anoche fuimos a tomar unas copas en el puerto.
Last night we went to the harbour to have a drink.

Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Advocacy Coalition

MIRA Bulletin
15 October 2008

As many of you know, the Governor is slated to make midyear budget cuts to many of the programs that affect immigrant communities. At a briefing last week, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, JudyAnn Bigby, informed us that the Governor asked her to make a 7% cut in the EOHHS budget. Other Secretariats have also made 7-10% cuts in their budgets. Today, the Secretary of Administration and Finance, Leslie Kirwan, will be making an announcement about the budget and revenue projections and later the Governor will also be announcing his 9C cuts.

We need your help to protect programs for the immigrant community including: Citizenship for New Americans, RISE (services for immigrant victims of violence), Adult Basic Education/English for Speakers of Other Languages, and Outreach and Education funding for health care.

Please contact Governor Patrick at (617) 725-4005, Secretary of Health and Human Services, JudyAnn Bigby at 617-573-1600 and Secretary of Labor and Workforce Development, Suzanne Bump at 617-626-5680 to ask them to protect these programs for immigrant families. If you have any questions, please contact Carly Burton at the MIRA Coalition at cburton@miracoalition.org or call (617) 350-5480 ext 208.

Electoral Updates

Electoral Canvassers

MIRA is looking for Electoral Canvassers in Marlborough, MA and Nashua and Manchester, New Hampshire to work on our electoral education campaign there. For more information and a job description, please click here and/or contact Carlos Saavedra at 617-350-5480 x200.

Elections Department

The Boston elections department is still trying to recruit more people - especially bilingual ones - to serve as pollworkers on November 4th and November 4th. Boston has 254 precincts, and each precinct is required to have six (6) pollworkers, so we need at least 1,524 individuals to help us on those two election days!!! Interested folks can download the application form here.

Vote No on Question 1

MIRA encourages our members to learn more and vote No on Question 1 campaign. The income tax question on the ballot this fall will have consequences for all of us. According to the campaign, this binding referendum could take $12.7 billion - nearly 40 percent - out of the state budget, driving up local property taxes and leading to drastic cuts in services. Funding for services to immigrants and refugees, including citizenship preparation, ESOL and adult basic education programs and health programs could be affected. All communities could suffer sweeping education cuts, steep reductions in public safety personnel and further deterioration of roads and bridges. Learn more about Vote No on Question 1 by clicking on the image above.

Immigrant Students Organizing Sat Oct 18th

Federal Updates: USCIS

Temporary Protected Status (TPS) Extensions

TPS has been extended for nationals of Nicaragua through July 5, 2010, nationals of Honduras through July 5, 2010, and nationals of El Salvador through Sept. 9, 2010.

TPS beneficiaries must submit the Application for Temporary Protected Status Form I-821 without the application fee and the Application for Employment Authorization Form I-765 in order to reregister for TPS. All applicants seeking an extension of employment authorization through July 5, 2010 must submit the required application filing fee with Form I-765. If the applicant is only seeking to reregister for TPS and not seeking an extension of employment authorization, he or she must submit Form I-765 for data-gathering purposes only, and is not required to submit the I-765 filing fee. The biometric service fee must be submitted by all reregistrants 14 years of age and older. Applicants may request a fee waiver for any of the application or biometric service fees in accordance with the regulations. Failure to submit the required filing fees or a properly documented fee waiver request will result in the rejection of the re-registration application.

More information can also be obtained from the USCIS National Customer Service Center toll-free number: 1-800-375-5283. TPS forms are available from the toll-free USCIS Forms line, 1-800-870-3676, or from the USCIS Web site: <http://www.uscis.gov/>.

Subject: important bilingual ballot update - not yet public

Sam Yoon asked to meet with Cyndi and me this morning. Last Thursday, Speaker DiMasi's office set up a private meeting for Sam to meet with Galvin, along with Aaron from DiMasi's office and Geoff Richelew from the Election Laws Committee (Chairman Bradley's office).

They had an hour-long meeting, the upshot of which is that Galvin is offering to do a five-year extension of Ch. 111, the original legislation for state compliance with the DOJ agreement--i.e., extension of Chinese and Vietnamese bilingual ballots through 2013, at which point the new census data will kick in, but without transliteration of names. He says that he is against transliteration but is willing to engage in "constructive dialogue" about it, no specifics or timetable offered for this, and the implication is no direct meetings with the coalition. He also said that he is willing to put forward the legislation to extend this year, but that he wants to make sure that Wilkerson does not try to attach our bill onto his extension bill or he will not do it. Other than that, Galvin did not appear to be asking Sam for any other concession.

Obviously, this is not what we have been fighting for, since the "bilingual ballot" will still not help most of the elderly voters. But Sam and Cyndi both felt this is a significant victory for us, which wins the Vietnamese bilingual ballots and fully bilingual Chinese ballots for city elections in time for next year. We could then continue to fight for transliteration after building a broader coalition with others outside of the Asian community who also have many beefs with Galvin.

On the negative side, this would make the transliteration fight more difficult to argue for as a very basic voting rights issue, because the public perception will be that we "already have bilingual ballots."

What are people's thoughts? Should we try to have a strategy meeting soon? CPA has scheduled a meeting to talk to some of the core elderly voter activists this week, but is pretty busy with No on Question One work through Election Day.

SUBJECT:Morrissey Blvd

MESSAGE:I have emailed the mayor's office regarding the intersection on Morrissey Blvd, after the Boston Globe where the entrance to UMass Boston is. Heading toward the gas tanks, on the Boston Globe side at this set of lights, the far right lane has a green light the majority of the time which becomes congested to say the least. All lanes are clearly marked and a cobble stone strip indicates the flow of traffic being 3 lanes left and 1 lane straight. My previous email was saying how dangerous drivers have become by-passing the line of cars waiting to proceed through this 1 lane and nearly crashing to squeeze themselves through the narrow passage, official vehicles as well. I was replied to within a few days and said this matter will be looked into. LOOKED INTO MEANT SETTING UP CONSTRUCTION BARRELS CREATING 2 LANES. HOW IS THIS THE CORRECT WAY TO DEAL WITH THESE AGGRESSIVE MOTORISTS? It was appalling to drive down Morrissey, after addressing this issue, and see that the solution was to have two lanes race down an extremely busy boulevard and cram into 1 lane. If you donnot know the lane I am speaking of look it up on Google street. Please email me with your reasoning, and your solution to this.

This might be an opportunity if asked - to talk about the need for additional resources to help communities do outreach & education for the most hard to reach folks.

Fyi. Maria did end up getting the information about the 30 lowest participating census tracts, but we successfully got her to focus more broadly than Boston. It looks like she is going to "humanize" the story by looking at 3 census tracts, including one in Boston. You might prep the Mayor's communications people and BRA.

Holly and Rob,
Hi there! So I narrowed it down to three census tracts, in Lowell, Chelsea and Boston. All had lower than 50 percent response rate on the census.

What do you think?

City	Census tract
Boston	25025100100
Chelsea	25025160200
Lowell	25017311200

All have a pretty sizable immigration population. I think Boston's was 1 in 4, and the others had even higher rates. Would love to get your thoughts.

Thanks again for your help!

Hi Maria,
Here is a spreadsheet that contains response rates by municipality. I have ordered them by response rate. Again you may want to consider how many forms are mailed out. There are a number of towns in the top ten lowest response rate that mailed out less than a 1,000 surveys. Focusing on a low response rate in some of these towns may be misleading and are not very instrumental in helping the reader to understand how the state can best allocate it's resources to increase response rates of undercounted populations. In most cases it screens the concentrations of undercounted populations. The response rates that we provided by census tract better captures the challenges of undercounted populations. If you have any questions feel free to call me on my cell phone 617-283-6123.

I stopped by your office today and delivered a signed letter of the same letter that is attached to this e-mail.

I will stop by your office tomorrow to find out whether I will be able to meet with you very soon or if you could tell me who I can get in touch with that you know will be able to give the name and address that I am looking for and need.

Your job allowed you clearance to go to the jurisdiction where my father is staying. Since I am not asking anyone to accompany me to the address now, I would think that more people would be eligible to give me the information.

Once I have the information, the FBI will be able to confirm if I still need an escort there and perhaps would get in touch with a detective they trust to accompany me there is needed.

I appreciate your time on this matter and hope to have some type of answer tomorrow.

Thanks You.Diana Kottori

Hi Mr Mayor,

Please see the attached word document letter. Please let your front desk receptionist know how soon I can meet with you or who else that you know of could give me the information that I need.

I am trying to avoid civil and criminal court action in order to get the information that I need. Highly likely and verifiable that suspects have already been determined on this case and will be charged with the same violations anyway. Using me to force out other evidence before a case is completed undercover investigation makes no sense.

I will also mail a signed copy of the letter to your office.

1. Mass. short by as much as $1.5b

Patrick set to announce deep cuts today

By Matt Viser, Globe Staff | October 15, 2008

Governor Deval Patrick today is expected to announce that state revenues will decline this year by as much as $1.5 billion, giving greater urgency to the state budget cuts and layoffs he is expected to announce in a televised news conference this afternoon.

The governor is planning to announce the cuts at 5 p.m., giving him a local news broadcast platform so he can speak directly to Massachusetts residents and explain to them how the national and foreign economic chaos has hit home.

"People will feel this in their services," Patrick said yesterday in remarks to reporters. "This is not about, you know, cutting so-called fat. This is going to cut muscle, because the scale of the issue requires that. We're going to feel it in services, we're going to see a smaller work force."

Patrick has been working with top officials in his administration to develop the targeted, specific reductions. But in public he has kept his pronouncements general, saying only that he plans to eliminate hundreds of millions of dollars from the $28.2 billion budget that is only three months old.

The governor met for nearly 1 1/2 hours last night with top House and Senate leaders in Senate President Therese Murray's office. Those involved declined to discuss any details of the meeting.

The growing size of the revenue shortfall, pegged just two weeks ago at $400 million, is in large part a result of plummeting amounts collected in taxes on capital gains. Losses in the stock and real estate markets mean that there have been fewer such taxes to collect. Other revenues, including sales and income taxes, are also expected to decline as consumer spending dries up and the unemployment rate rises.

The state disclosed the larger budget gap, which it said would be $800 million to $1.5 billion, in a disclosure document filed jointly for bond investors by state Treasurer Timothy P. Cahill and Secretary of Administration and Finance Leslie A. Kirwan. The document was filed on Friday, but was not previously released.

On top of the revenue shortfalls, the state also is facing an imbalance on spending items. The state reported to investors in August that there were about $600 million in unbudgeted items. This involves things such as probable increases in energy costs or healthcare, or additional social services that will be needed during a sour economy.

The unbudgeted expenses category is an annual gamble for budget writers. In recent years, it has not been a problem because revenues exceeded predictions; now, in an economy mired in negative territory, unbudgeted expenses came up a loser. Kyle Sullivan, an administration spokesman, said last night that the $600 million estimate had been lowered, but would not provide a new figure before today's announcement.

Fiscal observers are adding the $600 million and the $1.5 billion together and saying Patrick's problems are just beginning.

"This is at least a $2 billion problem, and it could be worse," said Michael J. Widmer, president of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation. "It reflects the calamitous events of the last three weeks."

Widmer said everything from longer lines at the Registry of Motor Vehicles to longer waits for environmental permits could result from budget cuts. They also could trigger increases in various state fees, as well as tuition hikes at public colleges and universities. The Globe reported last week that higher education administrators are scrambling to reduce spending after receiving word from state officials that their subsidies will be cut by an estimated 5.6 percent.

Budget observers also expect the governor to tap the state's $1.8 billion reserve account, but it was unclear last night to what extent. The current state budget relies on about $400 million from the rainy day fund; Patrick would need approval from the Legislature to spend more.

Patrick indicated yesterday he is not planning to cut money given to cities and towns - yet. Patrick also would need approval from the Legislature to cut local aid.

"We're doing our level best not to go at either local aid or Chapter 70 [education] funding," Patrick said. "So far, I think we'll be able to do that, or at least not touch it in significant ways."

Patrick met in private yesterday with labor union leaders but did not release many specifics, apparently fearing leaks of his plan. Lieutenant Governor Timothy P. Murray, who met last Friday with mayors, held a conference call yesterday with town officials.

Those who have participated in the meetings said they appreciated the governor soliciting their input, but they came away from the meetings with few indications of how the cuts will affect their areas.

Patrick vowed earlier this month to trim his office budget by 7 percent - which amounts to $600,000 - and the Legislature responded by agreeing to cut 10 percent, or $9.1 million. He has also acknowledged that some of his long-term spending initiatives and campaign promises might have to be curtailed, and he has not ruled out reviving his casino gambling legislation to raise money.

Massachusetts has faced several difficult budget years recently that triggered midyear cuts.

Acting Governor Jane Swift cut $202 million from the state budget in October 2002, and then cut $60.7 million more in December. Governor Mitt Romney used his emergency budget powers to slice $344 million from spending in January 2003, including $114 million from local aid and $133 million from health and human service programs.

In November 2006, Romney cut $425 million, but several weeks later restored $41.4 million when tax collections came in stronger than expected.

Patrick, who had just won election, then restored the remaining $383.6 million in emergency spending cuts made in the previous month by Romney, saying they were harmful to thousands of needy residents and not necessary to balance the state's books.

Republicans yesterday began pointing to that decision as one of the reasons the state is facing budget difficulties.

2. Rispoli: Vote yes on Question 3

Milford Daily News

Posted Oct 15, 2008 @ 12:09 AM

Most people are not aware of the horrible suffering caused by dog racing. For over 20 hours a day, greyhounds are confined to cages barely big enough for them to turn around in. Since 2002, over 800 greyhounds were reported injured at the two race tracks in Massachusetts. They suffered broken bones, head traumas, cardiac arrest, paralysis or sudden death. They are almost always destroyed (killed) after an injury. Each of the race tracks are required to have 1,000 dogs in order to function as a gambling business.

After three or four years, the greyhounds become too old to race and are disposed of. But thousands more are being bred across the country each year to replace them. Humane group volunteers donate their time to try to save as many greyhounds as they can, but finding homes for these greyhounds means other dogs, at already overburdened shelters, will not find homes because there aren't enough homes.

Don't be fooled by the expensive commercials that the wealthy racetrack owners spend millions of dollars on. The racing industry regards the dogs as commodities that are destroyed when they don't raise profits and win races. Commercial dog racing is already illegal in 34 states, including Maine and Vermont.

Dog racing is a dying industry. Between 2002 and 2006, the total amount gambled at Wonderland Greyhound Park and Raynham Park declined by 57 percent and 35 percent, respectively. Ballot Question 3 can phase out dog racing by 2010. This ballot question is supported by the MSPCA, human groups and hundreds of veterinarians and lawmakers. Please visit www.GREY2KUSA.org to learn more. We can't do this without your help! On Nov. 4, please vote yes on Question 3.

EVELYN RISPOLI,

Marlborough

Heir on Hill returns cash from lobbyists in probe

By Dave Wedge | Wednesday, October 15, 2008

A no-bid contract scandal hammering House Speaker Salvatore F. DiMasi is now rattling his heir apparent amid revelations DiMasi pals slammed by the state Inspector General ponied up campaign cash for Ways and Means Chairman Robert A. DeLeo.

The contributions from six lobbyists and strategists for Cognos - all tagged by the IG last week for allegedly failing to report lobbying fees - came just days after the Legislature handed their software client millions in state contracts, records show.

After being contacted by the Herald yesterday about $3,200 in donations made to him by Cognos operatives at a May 17, 2007, fund-raiser, DeLeo - locked in an intense battle with Majority Leader John Rogers to succeed DiMasi as king of the Hill - immediately said he would return the money.

Six people who gave to DeLeo at the event - including lobbyist Richard McDonough, strategists Richard Caturano, Richard Vitale and Joseph Lally and lawyers John McLaughlin and Robert Berluti - were named in a letter last week from IG Gregory Sullivan to Secretary of State William Galvin detailing $4.6 million in questionable fees related to the Cognos deal.

Sullivan's inquiry - which made no "investigative findings" - showed that Cognos recorded the money as coming from the firm's "lobbyist program," and that the individuals never reported them to the state as lobbying fees. Galvin is investigating.

DeLeo also received another $5,000 from McDonough's clients at the fund-raiser, records show.

"These contributions from over a year ago are among hundreds of other donations to the committee. They were part of a fund-raiser along with other supporters' donations. Because of recent information in news stories and the IG letter of just a few days ago, we will be returning the donations from these individuals," a DeLeo spokesman told the Herald.

McDonough has contributed to Rogers and DeLeo since 2002.

A $5.5 million contract for "ongoing costs" associated with a Cognos-run technology program began as an amendment in DeLeo's committee in early 2007, sources said.

A separate $13 million Cognos deal was yanked by Gov. Deval Patrick earlier this year after the IG found that several DiMasi friends and allies profited from the no-bid contract, including some who allegedly failed to report fees.

Vitale, for example, was paid $500,000 by a firm representing Cognos on Aug. 31, 2007 - the day the state wired $13 million to the software company, the IG said.

The May 2007 DeLeo campaign event raised a total of $30,000 and occurred more than a month after the lawmaker's annual fund-raiser at Joe Tecce's restaurant in the North End. Included in the Cognos-linked donations is a $500 contribution to DeLeo from Kristin Major, whose husband, Bruce, was also named in the IG's letter to Galvin, records show.

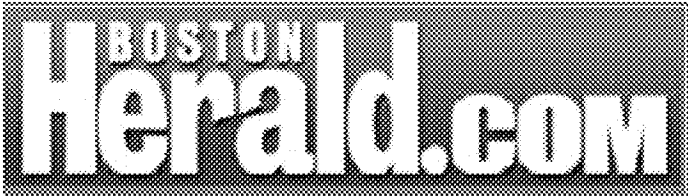

McDonough did not return calls seeking comment. Lally's lawyer did not return a call. A spokesman for Vitale and Caturano declined comment.

'Muscle' cuts coming to budget

By Hillary Chabot | Wednesday, October 15, 2008

State officials and employees are bracing for massive layoffs and possible payless furloughs in the face of deep cuts that could reach a whopping $800 million, as new estimates showed a revenue shortfall of up to $1.5 billion in the Bay State's $28 billion budget.

"It's going to be strong medicine," said Sen. Michael Morrissey (D-Quincy) about cuts expected to be announced today by Gov. Deval Patrick. "And even then, we may have to go deeper."

Patrick hinted that savings could come from other areas, and so unpaid time off, four-day workweeks and even state leases came under the microscope as Beacon Hill officials looked to save jobs.

"Everything is pretty much on the table," said Juan Martinez, spokesman for the executive office of Health and Human Services.

The cuts will affect core services and state employees will be laid off, Patrick said, but he did not provide any specifics yesterday about where he will slash and by how much.

“This is not about, you know, cutting so-called ‘fat.’ This is going to cut muscle because the scale of the issue requires that,” Patrick said, adding he hopes to spare local aid and some state education funding.

“We’re doing our level best not to go at either local aid or Chapter 70 funding. And so far, I think we will be able to do that or at least not touch it in a significant way.”

The $1.5 billion revenue shortfall means Patrick should be slashing between $600 million and $800 million, said fiscal watchdog Michael Widmer, who expected Patrick to cut via layoffs, earmarks and possibly voluntary furloughs.

Patrick held an hour-long meeting with AFL-CIO president Robert Haynes yesterday morning, telling him that while the administration would respect collective bargaining, there would be layoffs and unions would be asked to share the pain.

Patrick officials kept their plans under wraps, only briefing top lawmakers of their plans late yesterday .

Secretary of State William Galvin, facing a high-turnout presidential election, is still working on cutting his department by 7 percent. He’s considered cutting or moving some Registry of Deeds branches, such as in Fitchburg and Lawrence.

“I have identified some savings there,” said Galvin, who spoke with the Patrick administration again yesterday. “But until the election is over, it’s hard to know how much exactly I can cut.”

Debby and Howard,

So admittedly, the BPS reprogramming effort has taken much attention so I may have missed some sort of follow up on the summit we were developing to address the needs of families of children with autism. I have in my notes from our Sept. meeting that the next step was to finalize a mission statement of some sort so that we could move forward with parameters/guidelines, etc. Do either of you know where we are with this?

Thanks so very much,

Hi Colleen.

Thanks for your help. The title of the job I have applied for is Budget Coordinator for the BPS. The position reports directly to the budget director.
If you can pass this on to Martha Pierce that would be great. I've also e-mailed my friend Dennis Galvam who once had your job. I have attached my resume.

Thanks again,

Bill

Reminder to All Recipients:

When you receive a Service Request via email from the Mayor's 24Hr Service...if you could hit the REPLY button and send a response/update/resolution to the case, it would be extremely helpful in facilitating our updates/close-outs of calls (which is important for reporting purposes).

As I am sure you all recall, one of the initial goals of the CRM project was to "Provide Better Service at Same or Lesser Cost"! Your assistance in helping the Mayor's 24Hr Call Center to achieve this goal is greatly appreciated!

Please do not hesitate to contact us at (617) 635-4500 with any questions or concerns you may have.

Thanks, - janine

Subject: Claremont Neighborhood Meeting 10/15

Hi Michael,

Claremont made an agenda for the upcoming general meeting at their board meeting this past week. Jay and I will be at the meeting next Wednesday.

Issues and questions that the Claremont Neighborhood will be discussing at their regular meeting on Wednesday 10/15:

City Budget and the allocation of resources and city services

How is it decided what different neighborhoods get in the budget?

Do some neighborhoods get disproportionately more than others?

Does need or condition of the neighborhood factor into who gets what services?

Why do some streets get street sweeping and big bellies, while others with a seemingly equal need don't?

Let me know if you want to discuss anything before the meeting.

Have a great weekend.

Tabitha

I apologize for the error.

Hope to see you this Thursday night.

Thanks,

Patti
